Kourtney Kardashian, 39, strips down to NOTHING for very first GQ shoot... after Kim, Khloe, Kylie

Kourtney Kardashian will turn 40-years-old in five months but she sure doesn't look it. The Keeping Up With The Kardashian star appeared youthful as she took the January 2019 cover of GQ Mexico in just her birthday suit.

The 39-year-old mother-of-three left absolutely nothing to the imagination, covering her breasts with just a hand while offering up a full look at her famous derriÃ¨re.

She showed off her bronze body while turning over her shoulder to flash a seductive look.

Tousled hair and simple makeup added to her understated sex appeal.

And Kourtney bared all again in a smoldering black and white photo where she laid her front on the naked concrete to showcase her pert backside once more.

On the cover of the book, Kourt looked fit in a white tank top that looked like it had been sewn into a onesie.

The photo essay was done by veteran photographer Michael Schwartz in what appeared to be a modern mansion.

The images were startling, proving that Kourtney is far from the 'least exciting to look at' as her sister Kim so harshly claimed on KUWTK.

And the diva gave an early Christmas gift to her fans: three completely nude photos.

Another cover shot saw the star in a black turtleneck top with apparently no underwear at all, putting her backside on full display.

Kourtney, who used to date Scott Disick, has been working out nonstop since she was a teen.

She often says she burns hundreds of calories in her home gym before she starts the day.

This is a first GQ cover for Kourtney; her sister Kim has already appeared in US GQ several times and Kylie Jenner took a cover with Travis Scott.
