She has shunned the Spice Girls' reunion to work on her eponymous fashion brand. And Victoria Beckham showed off her sartorial flair as she stepped out in London in an all-red ensemble on morning.

The singer-turned-fashionista, 44, looked effortlessly chic in a scarlet polo neck and a floaty knee-length skirt as she headed to a breakfast meet and greet at her Dover Street store.

Making a bold fashion statement, Victoria added a boost to her petite frame with heeled red leather boots from her own line, retailing at Â£1,250.

She complemented the look with a matching clutch bag and donned a pair of her signature over-sized shades.

The mum-of-four wore her brunette locks in a simple ponytail and finished off her stylish outfit with a bronzed make-up look and dark pink lip.

The designer took to Instagram to show off her outfit as she posed inside her shop, writing: 'Had so much fun this morning celebrating the start of the festive season at Harryâ€™s Bar with my clients, wearing my #VBPreSS19 top, skirt and boots. Love this all red look! X'

Victoria's outing comes after she insisted she will 'absolutely' be attending next summer's Spice Girls reunion tour, despite deciding not to perform in it.

The singer-turned-fashionista spoke to Extra before accepting her People's Choice Award, where she was asked point blank why she isn't taking part with her fellow band mates.

'I have so much going on with my business and my family,' Victoria explained. 'I think the girls are going to do a great job!'

Victoria went on to insist she will be attending one of the dates - which keep being added to thanks to popular demand from the fans.

'Absolutely! I am very, very excited for them!' she said. 'They have great things planned, and I am looking forward to it.'

Victoria has shown enthusiasm for some form of reunion since back in February, when she congregated with Mel B, Mel C, Emma Bunton and Geri Horner at Geri's home, for a meeting about plans.

She was the first of the fivesome to upload a shot of the five of them to Instagram, captioning it: 'Exciting!'
