She's the former N-Dubz singer and X Factor judge, who always made waves with her stunning looks and sultry style.

Tulisa proved she's still causing a splash as she enjoyed a solo afternoon by the pool on Sunday, during her current stay in Los Angeles.

The Living Without You songstress, who turned 30 over the summer, showcased her phenomenal physique as she strutted alongside the swimming pool in a plunging, halterneck bikini in black and white, with high-waisted bottoms.

Brandishing a Pretty Little Thing tagline, the two-piece accentuated the singer/songwriter's lengthy pins, toned arms and ample bust.

She wore her raven locks in loose, wet strands around her features, and accessorised with a pair of black and white shades, designed with a futuristic-meets-vintage edge.

She was seen stepping out of the cool water, make-up minimal and fresh, and hitting the sun lounger for some extra rays.

The TV and music star is said to be making a comeback soon, having kept a low profile over the past couple of years, after a number of legal issues.

The latest turned out in her favour, having taken out a lawsuit against Black Eyed Peas performer and producer

Will.i.am, over an issue regarding the track Scream And Shout, which he worked on with Britney Spears.

Tulisa made a return to the spotlight as she stepped out to celebrate landing her first lead role in upcoming film Diva at Santa Monica's Loews Hotel in Los Angeles last Monday evening.

In the London-set film, The Female Boss star plays Sista C, an international pop star whose sister is killed in a brutal gangland murder.

Putting family before her career, she leaves her Los Angeles home to uncover the truth about her sibling's shocking killing.

Speaking on the film, Tulisa said: 'I'm thrilled to be working with Evolutionary films on this project and getting creative in the studio. This is a very exciting time!'

This is not the first time the brunette beauty has delved into the acting world, as she starred in 2011 films Demons Never Die and Big Fat Gypsy Gangster.

Tulisa rose to fame a member of N-Dubz in 2000, and has since released her debut album The Female Boss.

Speaking on Loose Women recently, she revealed there's 'no bad blood' since her win two months ago in a legal case against Britney and will.i.am for being left off writing credits on hit track Scream & Shout.

Tulisa said: 'I don't feel bad about it. At the end of the day it's not a move I would have done.'

'But look at the success that we've got out of it and off the back, I can't complain, I've got a Number One hit in loads of countries around the world, so everyone won. It's a shame it had to go that way, but chicken dinner, everyone's a winner.'

Tulisa had maintained she co-wrote the chart-topping song - which was released in November 2012 and went on to become Britney's first UK number one in eight years - and had planned to feature it on her debut album.

Her victorious five-year legal battle over songwriting credits is set to land the erstwhile N-Dubz star a massive payday, as she was awarded 10 per cent of the worldwide publishing rights and income from the song.

Tulisa helped pen the song under the title *I Don't Give A F**k* for her album The Female Boss. She was not only eventually shut out of recording the track but learned that Scream & Shout had been credited to Will.i.am, Jef Martens and Jean Baptiste.
