ACTRESS Sharon Stone still looks the part as she strikes her infamous pose from Basic Instinct.

But the Hollywood star, 61, made sure to wear a leotard in-case she flashed more than thighs through her fishnet stockings in a photo shoot for Vogue.

Her spread comes 27 years since the cult film in which she un-crossed her legs while commando to distract cops

Other cheeky throwbacks by cover star Sharon, who played killer Catherine Tramell, include flashing her chest and rear as she did during romps in the 1992 film with Detective Nick Curran, played by Michael Douglas, now 74

She is currently filming Netflix series Ratched, an adaptation of Ken Kesey novel One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

Sharon, from Pennsylvania, US, is single after divorcing twice and followed A-listers including Drew Barrymore and Adele in turning to online dating apps.

The mother of three adopted sons said: "Just as remarkable was how much being a mother taught me about myself. Every detail in my life became a little more magical.

"I'm now a single mother with three adopted sons, and it has been the great privilege of my life to raise them."
