Danniella Westbrook poses in a skimpy bikini as she plays tennis and smiles for photographers in the heatwave.

The ex EastEnders actress slipped into a glitzy all-white ensemble as she took to the court while temperatures soared to 34 degrees.

Shunning traditional tennis gear Danniella wore a halterneck bikini set as she worked up a sweat in the sunshine.

The 45-year-old is celebrating five months clean after telling us last week that she'll DIE if she takes another line of cocaine.

"I won't recover next time. If I relapse that's it," she said.

And it seems that she's working on her fitness to keep a healthy mind and body as she stays off the gear.

After swinging a few balls over the net, Danniella also tried shooting hoops in basketball.

Just hours earlier Danniella admitted she was in a "bad mood", but was "rescued" by a pal who took her for a spin in his convertible.

She tweeted a video of her sticking her tongue out while going for a drive.

Danniella has been hooked on drugs since she was 14 after shooting to fame as Sam Mitchell in EastEnders.

She went on to spend Â£250,000 on the habit, and was so hooked she admitted taking up to 5g of cocaine a day when pregnant with her son Kai - and even took the drug during labour.

Danniella - who also has daughter Jody - is backing the The Sun Online's End Of The Line campaign which aims to bust the myth that cocaine is a glamorous, consequence-free drug.

She is determined to kick the crippling habit for good and confessed: "I've got another relapse in me, but I don't have another recovery."

"I do or die for me. I know I'm one relapse away from dying."

Danniella entered the rehabilitation centre after her appearance on The Jeremy Kyle earlier this year.

She has since been clean for five months, and has thrown her support behind The Sun Online's End Of The Line campaign, which aims to bust the myth that cocaine is a glamorous, consequence-free drug.

Danniella has been hooked on drugs since she was 14 after shooting to fame as Sam Mitchell in EastEnders.

Danniella abused cocaine so badly that her septum - the cartilage that separates the two nostrils - fell out, and she has had to have surgery to repair her nose.
