

The #GoodNews we all need: Homeless woman does a happy dance after getting a job offer

07/10/2020 16:43 by admin

For her, it was a moment of pure joy. She had been homeless for 2 years, and this job was godsend for her. "When I got outside I didn't know that the cameras caught me," she said.

A young woman went viral on social media after her boss shared a video where she is shown dancing a little jig after getting the job.

During this time of pandemic, many have lost their jobs, and certainly finding work is not an easy task, since many companies are struggling to survive. However, where there is talent and optimism, there is always hope.

Restaurant manager Dakara Spence shared the happy dance video, saying: "So, I just hired this young woman and this was her response."

She said to local news agencies, "She had like a great energy, I felt it when she walked in, she seemed really positive." So she decided to give her the job.

"I called her phone and I said 'I'm going to hire you and I've seen your happy dance, so you can continue dancing' and she was just screaming through the phone. It was a beautiful moment for me," Spence said.

For Kayallah Jones, it was a moment of pure joy. She had been homeless for 2 years, and this job was godsend for her. "When I got outside I didn't know that the cameras caught me," she said.

Later, the young woman shared a photo on her Instagram and Twitter, where she says "my first day was a lot of fun with the lady who made me viral."

- Yahoo