The supermodel is famous for wearing the most incredible costumes to her annual spooky bash but after having to call it off in 2020 due to the coronavirus pandemic she has made the decision to also not stage it this year out of respect for people who are still being affected by COVID-19 and to ensure no one gets sick at her soiree.

In an interview with website TooFab, she said: 'With everything happening in the world right now, I feel like it's still too early for me to feel OK having a party...
