

Barack Obama, in tweet, praises high court decision on gay marriage

27/06/2015 13:36 by admin

Washington:Â Obama describes Supreme Court gay marriage ruling as "justice that arrives like a thunderbolt"

President Barack Obama took to Twitter to praise the Supreme Court's gay marriage decision as "a big step in our march toward equality."

Obama plans to deliver a statement Friday morning from the White House Rose Garden on the ruling that same-sex couples have a right to marry in all 50 states.

He then leaves for Charleston, South Carolina, where he will deliver a eulogy at the funeral for Rev. Clementa Pinckney, a state lawmaker and pastor of Emanuel African Methodist Church. Pinckney and eight others were killed there last week.

In his tweet, Obama says gay and lesbian couples now have the right to marry, "just like everyone else." He uses the hashtag #LoveWins, which has become a refrain for the gay marriage movement.

- AP